TO THE TEACHER

THE author believes that the small vocabulary of common words, the frequent reviews, the short sentences, the simple language and phonetic exercises, and the carefully selected and well-graded subject-matter will commend this primer to your intelligence.

There are never more than two new words on a page, only one hundred and ninety-eight in the book. These words are carefully repeated, most of them being used ten or more times. Every new word is given in both script and print, and there are frequent script exercises for tracing and copying. The sentences are short and simple, and the construction is varied as much as possible, to avoid the formation of singsong and monotonous reading habits. The child, confronted by the least possible labor in word getting, can easily master these pages. On completing them he has acquired a small but serviceable vocabulary of common words, and can begin any well-graded first reader with ease and intelligence.

It is supposed that you will begin early to drill your pupils in the sounds of letters and that you will later teach their names. Consonants may be taught as the initial sounds of familiar words, preferably in the following order, — l, m, n, f, r, t, s, c, p, b, h, g, d, j, w, y, k, q, v, z. The lists of simple phonograms and of double initial consonants on pages 67, 89, 106, and elsewhere can be made the basis of more extended work according to your judgment and the needs of your pupils. This phonetic drill trains ear and eye to recognize letters and words, gives the vocal organs distinctness of enunciation, and makes pupils self-helpful in learning new words.

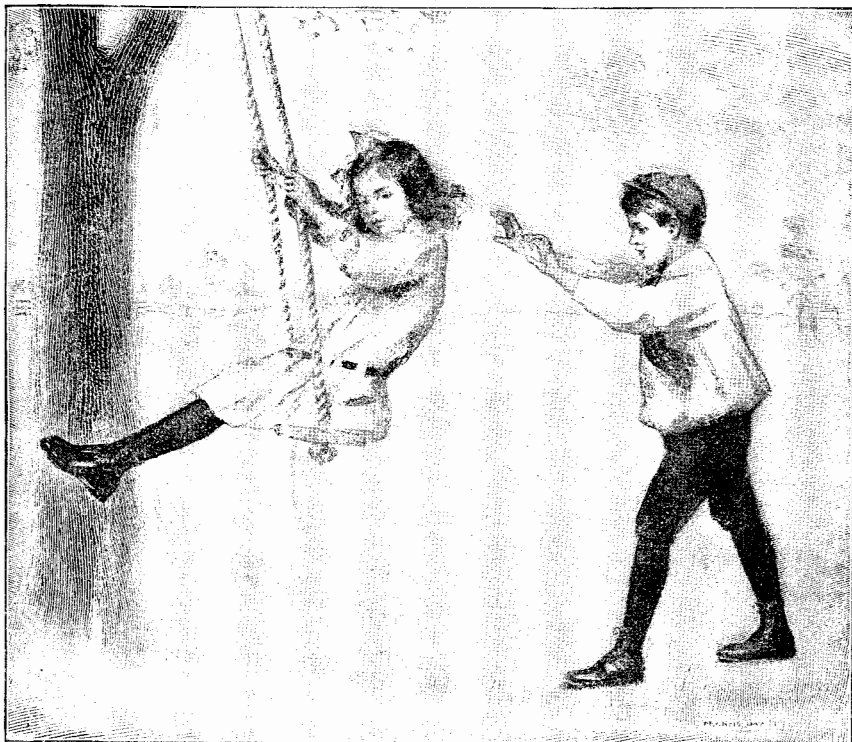

The subjects in this primer are those which appeal to the intelligent interest of children. Here are described and discussed familiar objects, plants, and animals, the common amusements of boys and girls, and the everyday round of home and school life.

May this little book lighten your task and make the beginnings of learning easy and pleasant for many children.

Oh, what a big tree there by the river!

The robin has his nest in that tree.

A squirrel, too, has his home there.

Tree, how good you are to the birds and the squirrels!

You give them homes.

What do you give us?

Trees are good to us, too, David.

They give us nuts and apples and cherries.

They give us wood for houses and boats.

Your bow and arrows are of wood.

This is father's birthday.

Shall I give him my doll?

Shall I give him a picture book?

He does not play with dolls.

He likes to read papers and big books.

This owl is in a tree.

At night it says, "Who,
who is cold,—is cold?

Who, who?

"I am, I am. Are you,
are you?"

Owl, is it cold there in the tree?

It is not cold here in the house.

Will you not come in?

Come in, come in.

Are you cold in your coat of feathers?

You may put on my doll's coat.

It is a pretty little blue coat.

cold cold

feathers feathers

The night is cold.

The moon shines in the sky.

It shines down on the white, white snow.

Paul and I are in the house.

Here are father and mother.

Rabbit, where are you now?

Do you run here and there on the cold
snow? Are you not cold?

Little squirrel, where are you?

There is snow on all the trees.

Are you asleep in your nest?

I do not see the robin now.

At night the owl comes to that tree.

He says, "Who, who? Who, who?"

asleep asleep snow snow

Oh, how cold it is now!

There are no leaves on the trees.

There are no flowers in my garden.

Down, down comes the snow.

Down it comes from the sky.

Then all the houses look white.

I like snow. I do not like rain.

What is the snow?

Is it the feathers of birds in the sky?

What cold feathers they are!

How pretty and white!

They are not at all like the feathers of the owl.

They are not like the robin's feathers.

A B C SONG.

What is that?

It is a tortoise.

It is a tortoise in his house.

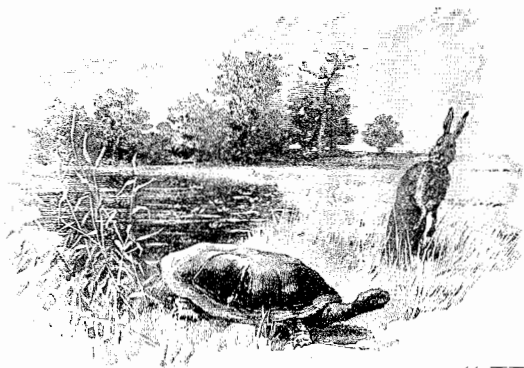

The tortoise can not fly.

He can not run.

He creeps on and on.

He takes his house with him.

tortoise tortoise creeps creeps

A rabbit runs and plays
in the grass.

There he sees a tortoise.

“How you creep!”

says the rabbit. “I run. You can not run like me.”

“I will race with you,” says the tortoise.

“I will race with you to that tree by the brook. I may beat you.”

“You beat me!” says the rabbit. “Now, let us see. Let us run a race.”

“One, two, three,—go!” says the tortoise.
